Horizon Milling Employee Wins Corporate Award for Outstanding Volunteerism

LAKE CITY, Minn. — Cargill recently presented a Cargill Cares Volunteer Award to Craig Dugstad, an employee of Horizon Milling, for his outstanding volunteer service. Craig has volunteered for nearly five years with the Lake City Athletic Boosters, serving as a coach for boys and girls in grades three through six in the summer Little League Baseball program. Horizon Milling is a joint venture flour milling business of Minnesota-based Cargill and CHS Inc.

To recognize Craig's commitment to community, Cargill has contributed $1,000 to the Lake City Athletic Boosters. Craig is among a special group of Cargill employees and retirees around the world to receive a Cargill Cares Volunteer Award since its inception in 1998.

“Cargill encourages our employees and retirees to give back to the community and is proud of the unselfish ways in which they enrich the communities where we conduct business,” said Mark Murphy, manager of corporate citizenship for Cargill. “The Cargill Cares Volunteer Awards' program is one way we recognize and thank Cargill employees for their important contribution to our communities.”

“Craig has been a tremendous leader in this community, volunteering countless hours to benefit our youth,” said Steve Matson, facility manager for Horizon Milling in Lake City. “We are pleased to recognize his efforts.”
